Foreword

Five good reasons to learn Chinese:

- 1 China has the biggest population in the world—1.4 billion people
- 2 If you speak English and Mandarin, you can communicate with over half the world's population
- 3 China is becoming a global economic superpower
- 4 The Chinese language is fascinating
- 5 You get much more out of a visit to China if you can speak some Chinese

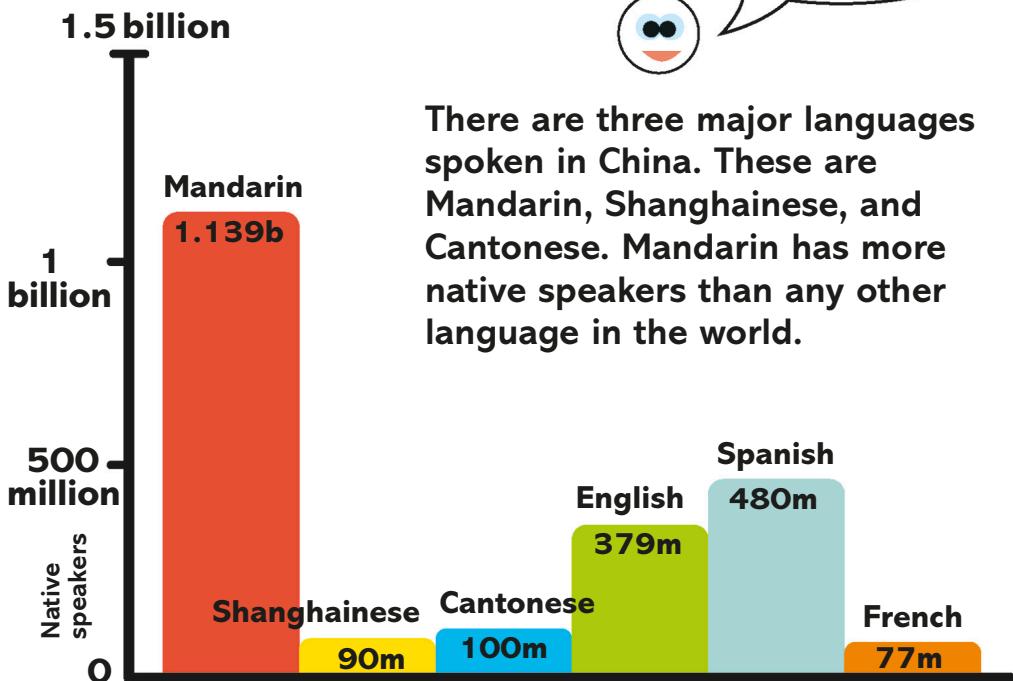

Hi!

太好了！

Tài hǎo le!

Mandarin has many different names in Chinese. Here are some, with their literal translations:

Guóyǔ	national language
Pǔtōnghuà	universal words
Hànyǔ	language of the Han
Zhōngwén	Chinese language

Chinese people learn Mandarin, too

At the fall of the Qing Dynasty in 1911, the incoming nationalist government decided that Mandarin should become the standard language of China, replacing the many languages and dialects that made communication between people difficult.

It was originally thought that Mandarin would be spoken by everyone by 2030. However, because of the size of China and the number of languages spoken, teachers in many schools still give classes in the local language. Mandarin is studied like a foreign language class, to use for speaking with nonlocals.

Using this book

You can take what you'd like from this book—read it as an overview of the culture, with some insight into the language on the way, or use it as a study aid to become a competent beginner. Whatever your approach, this book is a good place to start.

The secret to learning Chinese is:

慢慢来! Màn màn lái! Take it easy!

Pinyin

Pinyin is the name of the system we use to spell out the sounds of Chinese words in roman letters. It is a written aid to pronunciation.

No alphabet

Chinese writing doesn't use an alphabet. Instead it is made up of a series of characters, each of which are made up of mini pictures. We need help to know how to pronounce them, and that's where pinyin comes in.

For example,
how do you say
this character?

A large, stylized red Chinese character for 'cat', written in a bold, rounded font.

Using pinyin,
you pronounce it "māo" (and it means "cat").

Without knowing pinyin, it is very difficult for people to learn Chinese as a foreign language.

It is important to remember that pinyin is only a guide. The best way to learn the sounds of any language is to copy what you hear.

Listen to the audio

When you see this symbol in the book, audio material is available. Download the free DK Get Talking Chinese app from the App Store or Google Play, and play the track number shown.

About pinyin

Pinyin was adopted by mainland China in 1958 and is the romanization system used there today (and in this book). Other systems, such as “Wade Giles,” do exist, though they are used less and less.

These are the characters for “pinyin”

拼音

This means “sound” “to spell”

How to use it

Chinese words are made up of one-syllable sounds, such as “ma.”

❖ These sounds all start with an “initial.”
In the word “ma,” the initial is the “m” sound.

❖ And they all end with a vowel sound called a “final.”
In the word “ma,” the final is the “a” sound.

On the next few pages, there are tables for the initials and for the finals. It is really worth going through each sound with the accompanying app.

1.1

Table 1: Initials

Initial	Sound	Rough English sound
b	baw	bore
p	paw	pore
m	maw	more
f	faw	fall
d	duh	done
t	tuh	tore
n	nuh	nail
l	luh	late
g	guh	guard
k	kuh	come
h	huh	loch
j	gee	jeep
q	chee	cheese
x	she	ship
z	dzuh	"ds" in suds
c	tsuh	"ts" in cats
s	suh	see
zh	jir	germ
ch	chir	chin
sh	shir	shirt
r	rj	rank
w	ooh	swoon
y	ee	ye

Table 2: Finals

Final	Sound	Rough English sound
a	ah	are
ai	i	eye
ao	ow	owl
an	ahn	ant
ang	ahng	bang
o	aw	straw
ong	oong	too + ng
ou	oh	go
e	uh	duh
ei	ay	say
en	un	taken
eng	ung	lung
er	ar	are
i	ee/uh	tea/huh
ia	ya	yak
iao	yaow	meow
ian	yan	yen
iang	yahng	y + angst
ie	yeh	yes
in	een	din
ing	eeng	mowing
iong	yoong	you + ng
iu	you	Cleo

"i" is generally pronounced
"ee" except after these initials: c,
ch, r, s, sh, z, zh
when it is "uh."

Final	Sound	Rough English sound
u	oo	moo
ua	wa	suave
uo	waw	war
ui	way	way
uai	why	why
uan	won	oo-won
un	un	won
uang	wahng	wan + ng
ü	yoo	you
ue	oo-weh	you + eh
üan	ywan	you + wan
ün	yewn	you + n

To make the ü sound, try saying "ee," but through pursed lips.

Using the tables

When you see a word in pinyin:

- 1 Look up the first letter or two letters, which are usually consonants, on the Initials table.
- 2 Then look up the last letter or letters, which begin with a vowel, on the Finals table.
- 3 Put the two sounds together, and done!

1.3

Practice time

Listen to the pronunciation of these words on the app, then copy what you hear.

- | | | |
|----------|---------|----------|
| 1. yi | 6. qing | 11. quan |
| 2. zhong | 7. xi | 12. cong |
| 3. cui | 8. cai | 13. zai |
| 4. qiu | 9. re | 14. duo |
| 5. yue | 10. shi | 15. nü |

Pinyin pointers

- You need to look at each word carefully—they can look similar but have very different meanings.

zǒu

to go

zuò

to sit

- Many words in Chinese are made up of more than one sound. You tell where each sound ends and each new sound begins by using the initials as markers.

Mandarin Chinese

- Pinyin also includes “tone marks.” Turn the page to find out what these are for...

The tones

Mandarin Chinese has four tones and one “toneless” tone. The tone you use when pronouncing each one-syllable word determines the meaning. The tone marks ˉ ˊ ˇ ˋ show which tone to use.

1 1st tone— high level

Pitch your voice high and hold the sound there slightly longer than seems natural.

mā

mother

As a doctor tells you when looking down your throat. Say:

Aah!

2 2nd tone— rising

From the middle level of your voice range to the top. Raise your eyebrows as you say it!

má

hemp

The tone at the end of a question.

What?

Tone deaf?

The tones may seem complicated, but you will soon get the hang of them. Consider these facts:

- There are more tonal languages in the world than nontonal.
- Cantonese has at least eight tones. Imagine that!

The “neutral” tone

This isn't exactly a “tone.” It is just a light way of saying a word. Pronounce it as you would say a word in English with no emphasis. It has no tone mark.

ma

3 3rd tone— falling, then rising

From the middle level, down deep, then up a bit.

mǎ

horse

Like when you're surprised.

Really?

4 4th tone— falling

A short, sharp fall from your high voice pitch. Stamp your foot as you say it!

mà

scold

The tone of a statement.

- China has over 80 dialects, and for many Chinese people, Mandarin is not their first language—Chinese people can make mistakes with their tones, too.
- People who can't sing a note (or are “tone deaf”) may feel they can't learn Chinese, but this is not the case. It makes no difference, as tonal languages are relatively pitched, not absolutely pitched.

1.5

Learning the tones

If you don't learn the tones, quite simply, people will find it hard to understand what you say. Practice your tones by saying these words and listening to the audio.

1

māo cat

2 yuè

moon

3 gǒu dog

4 rén person

5 shǒu hand

6 shù tree

7 chē car

8 yáng

sheep

9 shū

10 máo

Saying tones in a row

Once you have grasped saying single-sound words with tones, try to put a few together, as you will need to do so when speaking Chinese.

1 sháozi spoon

This syllable is the neutral tone.

2

dìtú
map

3 xióngmāo panda

Don't worry about making funny faces while you try to get the tones right.

4 gōnggòngqìchē bus

5

xīnnián kuài lè!
happy new year!

Characters

The Chinese writing system is one of the most beautiful and ancient writing systems in the world. Before you start coming to grips with it, it's worth taking a few minutes to find out a bit about it.

Two styles

There are two forms of writing in existence today. The “traditional” characters are still used in most Chinese-speaking countries outside mainland China.

Mainland China predominantly uses “simplified” characters, and the simplified characters will be used in this book.

cloud—simplified

cloud—traditional

How many characters are there?

Altogether? More than 40,000—though many are very rare. 2,000 characters are needed for basic literacy (or to read a Chinese newspaper).

A well-educated person in China would know 4,000–5,000.

Top to bottom...

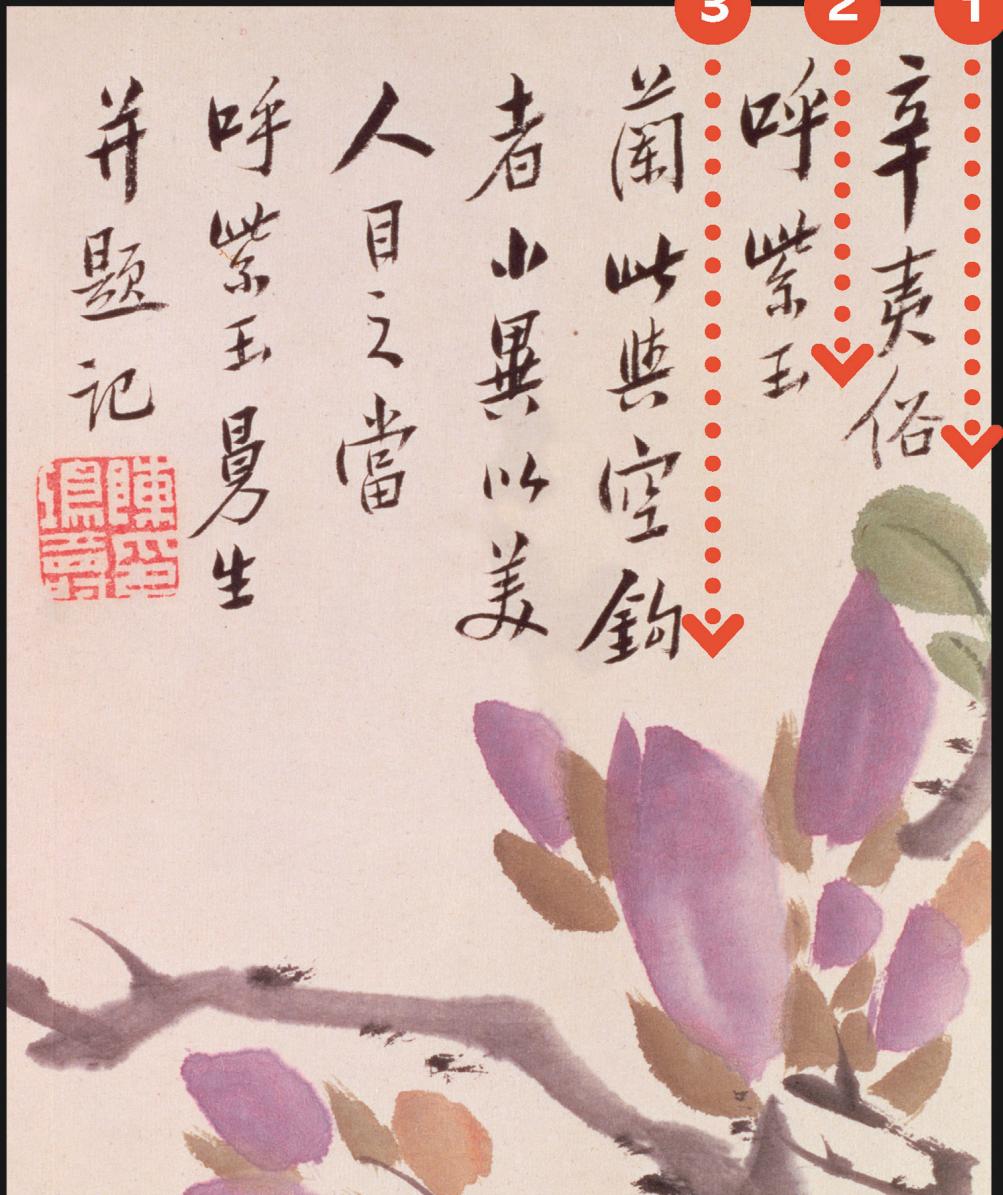

... right to left. Traditionally, Chinese characters have been laid out in the opposite way to English (though most modern publications follow the Western way).

1

Four types

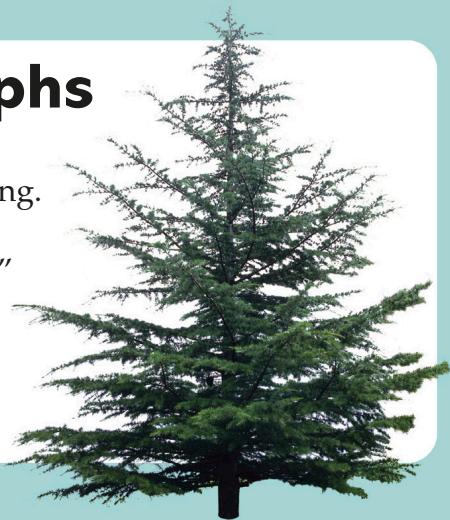

There are four different types of Chinese characters that you will learn to write. These intermingle with each other in any block of Chinese text.

tree

Pictographs

The character is a picture of something. For example, the character for "tree" looks like a tree.

one

Ideographs

The character is a picture of an idea. For example, the character for "one" is just one line.

"One" on a die is also an ideograph.

好 good

This is a pictograph for “woman.”

女 +

远 yuǎn far

园 yuán garden

Putting them together

The Chinese expanded their written language by putting pictographs or ideographs together to make new characters.

This is a pictograph for “child.”

子 = 好 child good

Ancient Chinese thought “woman” and “child” together was “good.”

Phonographs

To expand the language further, the meaning of one character was combined with the sound of another to make phonographs. For example, the characters for “far” and “garden” share the same part that gives them their pronunciation: 元 (yuán). Their meanings are given by the other parts of the characters.

sound	meaning	a new character
元 yuán	+ 走 to walk quickly	= 远 far yuǎn

元 yuán	+ 口 enclosure	= 园 garden yuán
-----------	------------------	-----------------------

Note: The sounds of the characters are almost the same—but they have different tones.

Different strokes

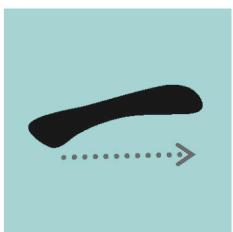

The writing of Chinese characters follows strict rules. The first thing to understand is that characters are made up of set strokes. These strokes are always written in the same way. Here are some basic strokes you need to write beautiful characters.

Follow the arrows that show the direction of the strokes and practice copying them.

Trace this table to practice.

Stroke order

The order in which you write the strokes is also important. For one thing, getting the stroke order right makes the characters easier to learn. The two general rules to follow are:

1 Write top to bottom

2 Write left to right

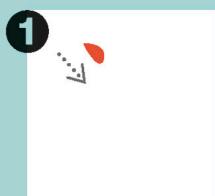

Practice writing this character:

huà

word

Start with the part of the character that is on the top left.

These rules are not foolproof, however, as some characters are written with differing stroke orders.

shí ten

left to right,
then top to bottom

yuè month

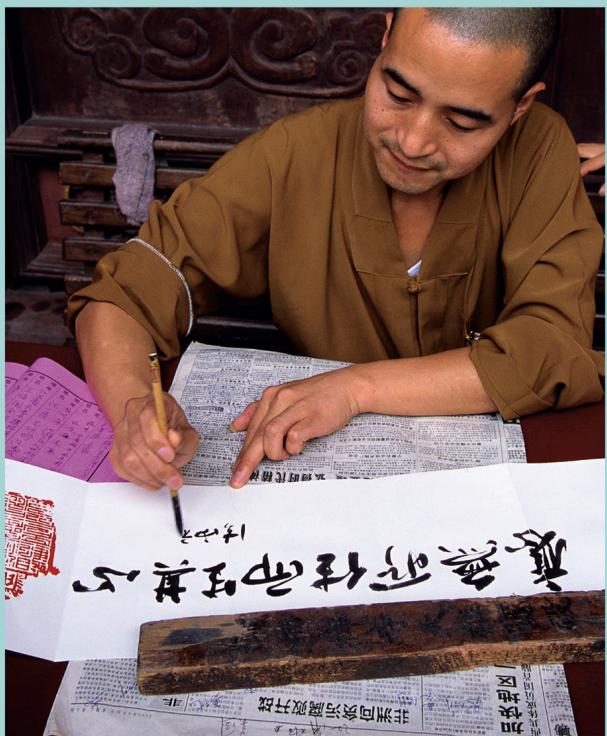

first outside,
then inside

xiǎo small

the middle,
then two sides

It all depended on what looked best or which order minimized blobbing when scholars were using brushes and ink to write.

How characters are made

中 zhōng

中 means “middle”

国

guó

国 means “kingdom”

The Middle Kingdom is what we now call

China

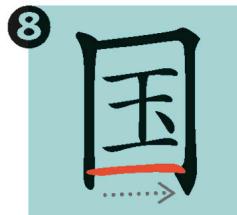

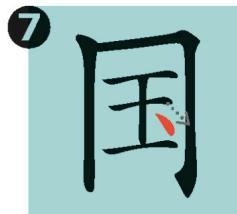

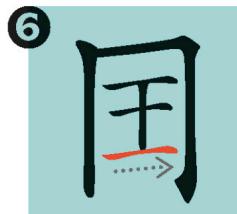

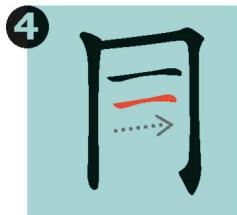

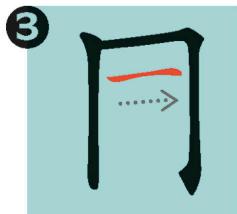

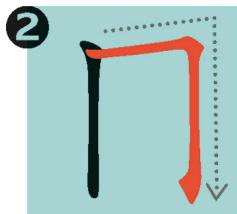

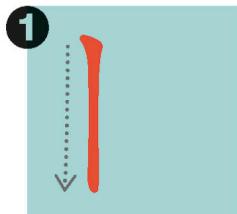

Be square

When you write each character, imagine you are writing it inside a square. You can buy or make graph paper for this purpose. Your characters will look more beautiful if they are evenly spaced, fit into equal-sized squares, and look symmetrical.

中 zhōng

国 guó

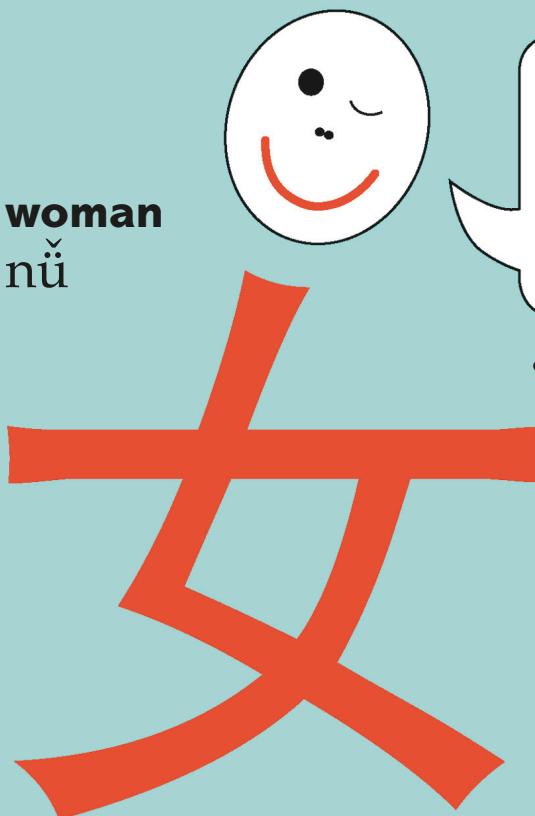

Memory tips

There is no really easy way to learn characters. Each one needs to be memorized. However, here are some pointers to help you.

- If you try to imagine a character as a picture, or if you know the origins of a character (see opposite for some examples), it makes it easier to remember.

woman
nǚ

It is best to learn characters gradually and to keep testing yourself and revising.

- There are about 200 small components of characters, called “radicals.” Each character includes a radical. The radical can give a clue to the meaning. For example, 鸟 niǎo, meaning “bird,” is a radical, and any character that contains 鸟 means something to do with birds (e.g., 鸡 jī means “chicken”).

Picture it!

Characters that are pictographs often look like the original pictures that were drawn centuries ago.

ri sun

yuè moon

shān mountain

shuǐ water

niǎo bird

mǎ horse

It's radical

Practice writing these characters. They are useful ones to know, as they can also be found in other characters as “radicals.”

rén

person

tǔ

earth

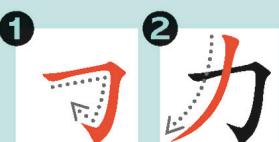

tián

field

lì

strength

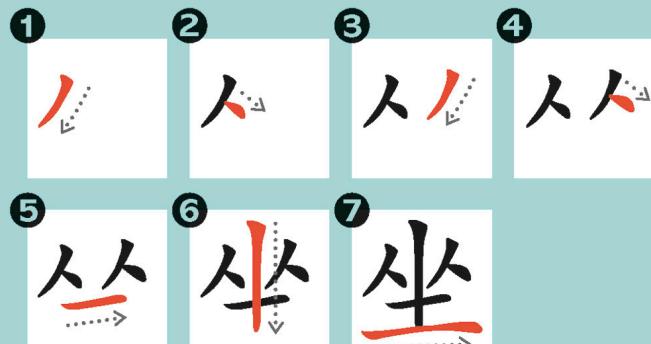

Put the characters together...

... to make new characters. Notice how the meanings of the new characters are directly related to the meanings of the original characters. It made sense in Ancient China.

坐

zuò

to sit

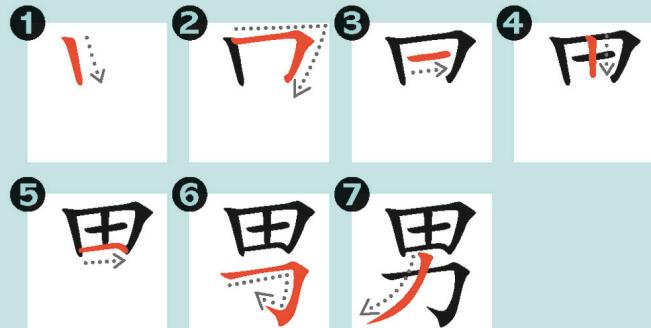

人 + 人 + 土 = 坐

Literally: people [on top of] earth

男 nán

man

田 + 力 = 男

Literally: strength [in a] field

Easy peasy grammar

“Easy peasy” and “grammar” don’t usually go together, but here’s an area of Chinese where there is less to learn. Hooray!

1.7

The verb doesn’t change

There is no need to learn different grammatical forms of verbs (like in many European languages).

是 to be shì

我是 wǒ shì I am

There is no change
to the Chinese verb...
but the English
changes three times.

你是 nǐ shì you are

他是 tā shì he is

1.8 No past, no future

In Chinese, there are no verb tenses. Here are two ways to change the tense:

1 Add context to a sentence with time words—for example, “next year,” “yesterday,” or “tomorrow.”

昨天 yesterday
zuótīān 明天 tomorrow
míngtiān

2 You can show an action has been completed by adding the little word “le” after the verb or at the end of the sentence.

了 le

我昨天去了。 Wǒ zuótiān qù le. I went yesterday.

我明天去。 Wǒ míngtiān qù. I am going tomorrow.

我去了。 Wǒ qù le. I went.

See! The verb in Chinese, “qù” (to go), doesn't change.

Note: The time comes BEFORE the verb in Chinese.

1.9

Singular and plural nouns

There is no difference between singular and plural nouns. In other words, there is no equivalent to the English “-s” or “-es” added to nouns.

马喜欢吃苹果 Mǎ xǐhuan chī píngguǒ. Horses like eating apples.

The Chinese for this sentence literally means “horse like eat apple.” As there is no particular horse being referred to, this is translated as a general statement. CONTEXT is important in Chinese.

In general

Chinese often uses fewer words and seems simpler. In fact, some of the expressions used in English that have come directly from Chinese highlight the simple grammar constructions:

long time no see	hǎo jiǔ bù jiàn	好久不见
look-see	kàn kan	看看
no can do	bù néng zuò	不能做
no-go	bù qù	不去

First words

What are the first words to learn in any language? These words, of course!

你好

2.2

Welcome!

Chinese people are very hospitable. When you visit, they will welcome you and offer you a drink. The drink of choice is often tea.

请进！

Qǐng jìn!

Please come in.

请坐！

Qǐng zuò!

Please
sit down.

请喝茶！

Qǐng hē chá!

Please have a cup of tea.

请 qǐng

This word means “please,” and you always put it at the beginning of sentences in Chinese.

These two characters mean “new words” and are pronounced “shēngcí”

2.3

New words

请 qǐng please

进 jìn to enter

坐 zuò to sit

喝 hē to drink

茶 chá tea

In China, tea is the national drink. There are many different types, with two popular varieties being black tea and green tea. Chinese people don't add milk to their tea.

2.4

How do you do?

When you meet Chinese people, greet them and introduce yourself in Chinese to make a good impression.

How are you?

你好吗？

Nǐ hǎo ma?

I'm very well.

我很好。

Wǒ hěn hǎo.

Two third tones in a row are difficult to say. When this happens, the first one is said as a second tone.

What's your name?

你叫什么?

Nǐ jiào shénme?

I'm called Wang Ying.

我叫王英。

Wǒ jiào Wáng Yīng.

This is a Chinese period.

A Chinese name for you

Not all English names can be easily pronounced in China, so it is a good idea for you to have a Chinese name.

Generally, a Chinese teacher or Chinese friend can help you choose one, and this is the best way to get one.

There are also websites that can give you a name.

2.6

Chinese names

Chinese names all have a meaning. They start with the family name, then the given names follow. Chinese people either have one or two given names.

Addressing Chinese people

Adults should always be addressed by their full name (surname, given name) or with a title, which comes AFTER the surname. For example:

先生 xiānsheng Mr

e.g., Wáng xiānsheng

老师

lǎoshī teacher

e.g., Liú lǎoshī

Jackie Chan's mother called him "Pao Pao," meaning "cannonball," when he was a baby.

Children or friends can be addressed by their given names or, if the person is a very good friend or family, by their nickname. Chinese people often have a nickname.

The family name

The majority of the population of China have one of just 20 surnames. Here's a list of the top five.

- 1 Lǐ
- 2 Wáng
- 3 Zhāng
- 4 Liú
- 5 Chén

姓 xìng surname

Given names

As for first names, parents can choose from thousands of characters. Here are some popular girls' and boys' names:

Girls

- 1 Yīng (talented, wise)
- 2 Xiù (elegant, beautiful)
- 3 Yù (jade)
- 4 Huá (brilliant)
- 5 Zhēn (precious)

名

Boys

- 1 Wén (culture, writing)
- 2 Míng (bright)
- 3 Guó (nation)
- 4 Huá (brilliant)
- 5 Dé (virtue)

Taboo!

Chinese people avoid giving their children the same name as a relative or famous person.

Conversation practice 1

Test yourself on what you have learned in this section.

Q.

Can you translate this conversation into Chinese?

- 1 Hello.
- 2 Hello.
- 3 How are you?
- 4 I'm very well.
- 5 Goodbye.
- 6 Goodbye.

A.

Here it is in Chinese.

- 1 你好! Nǐ hǎo!
- 2 你好! Nǐ hǎo!
- 3 你好吗? Nǐ hǎo ma?
- 4 我很好! Wǒ hěn hǎo!
- 5 再见! Zàijiàn!
- 6 再见! Zàijiàn!

Q.

Can you translate these phrases into Chinese?

- ① Where's the bathroom?
- ② Sit down, please.
- ③ Please come in.
- ④ What's your name?
- ⑤ I am called...

A.

Here are the correct translations.

- ① 厕所在哪儿?
Cèsuǒ zài nar?
- ② 请坐!
Qǐng zuò!
- ③ 请进!
Qǐng jìn!
- ④ 你叫什么?
Nǐ jiào shénme?
- ⑤ 我叫.....
Wǒ jiào...

Where are you from?

Find out how to say where you come from. This is one of the first questions you are asked in China.

你是哪国人?

Nǐ shì nǎ guó rén?

Which country are you from?

我是英国人。

Wǒ shì Yīngguórén.

I'm British.

哪 nǎ which

Here is the “question word” 哪. “Nǐ shì nǎ guó rén?” literally means “You are which country person?”

人 rén person

By adding “rén” to any of the country’s names, you are saying “people or person” of the country.

Countries

The characters for the country names are a mixture of how the word sounds (phonetic) and meaning.

	美国	Měiguó	USA (beautiful country)
	泰国	Tàiguó	Thailand (tranquil country)
	英国	Yīngguó	Britain (brave country)
	法国	Fǎguó	France (legal country)
	德国	Déguó	Germany (virtuous country)
	中国	Zhōngguó	China (middle country)
	日本	Rìběn	Japan (rising sun)
	加拿大	Jiānádà	Canada (phonetic)
	澳大利亚	Àodàlìyà	Australia (phonetic)
	荷兰	Hélán	The Netherlands (phonetic—Holland)

Respect!

Confucianism is the name of the philosophy that has shaped Chinese culture since around 300 BCE. And when it comes to families, Confucianism is all about respect.

孝 xìào

filial piety

Family lore

“Filial piety” is considered one of the greatest virtues of Confucianism. It means, in general terms, love and respect for parents and ancestors.

Confucius says...

Here are some of Confucius's rules for filial piety:

- 1 Take care of your parents
- 2 Don't be rebellious
- 3 Show love, respect, and support
- 4 Display courtesy
- 5 Uphold fraternity among brothers
- 6 Wisely advise your parents
- 7 Carry out sacrifices after their death

孔夫子

Kǒng fūzǐ Confucius

Confucius was born in c.551 BCE and was a social philosopher whose teachings have influenced East Asian life for 2,000 years.

Hierarchy

The Confucian hierarchy within families means that family members lower down in the hierarchy show filial piety to those above them. Grandpa is top dog, and littlest sister is on the bottom rung.

Test yourself on the Chinese names for family members (from page 48).

In the same way that children call their parents “Mom” and “Dad,” in China, this extends to the whole family. If you are “little sister,” that is what your family often call you.

祖父	zǔfù
祖母	zǔmǔ
爸爸	bàba
妈妈	māma
哥哥	gēge
弟弟	dìdi
姐姐	jiějie
妹妹	mèimeimei

Ancestor worship

Although these rules were set more than 2,000 years ago, Confucian beliefs are ingrained into Chinese culture and affect family relationships to the present day. One of the most noticeable aspects is ancestor worship.

Ancestor worship includes burning incense and making offerings to the deceased of food and other things—even a toothbrush and slippers—to use in the afterlife.

To count from 10–99, you build on the numbers 1–10. There are two simple rules to follow:

- If a number comes after 10 (+), you add it to 10.
- If a number comes before 10 (+), you times it by 10.

How it works

Number rules

There are a couple of things about numbers it is worth pointing out now.

4.5 Measure words

In Chinese, you need a measure word between a number and a noun. You can't just say "one person," you have to say "one something of person." Most Chinese measure words have no direct translation into English, although the concept is similar to "two plots of land," "two pinches of salt," and "four head of cattle."

个 ge

The toneless "ge" is by far the most common measure word. You can use this for most things. If in doubt, use "ge."

Number	Measure	Noun	Meaning
五 wǔ	个 ge	人 rén	five people
三 sān	个 ge	光 盘 guāngpán	three CDs

本 běn

"Běn" is the measure word used for books. Try to remember this one, too.

五 wǔ	本 běn	书 shū	five books

Birthday party

Traditionally, Chinese people have not made a big deal about birthdays. Nowadays, especially in the cities, they celebrate them with a cake and a party.

生日快乐!

Shēngri kuàile!

Happy birthday!

Two ages

Chinese people may have two ages—one from the traditional age system and one from the Western age system.

Two years old

The traditional way of counting a person's age is that newborns start at one year old, and one year is added at each Chinese new year (which follows the lunar calendar). This explains why Chinese babies can be said to be "two years old" when they are still tiny.

How old are you?

There are two ways of asking this question in Chinese:

1 你几岁了?

Nǐ jǐ suì le?

How old are you?

Use this when you are addressing a child under 10.

2 你多大了?

Nǐ duō dà le?

How old are you?

Use this for adults and children.

To answer the question, you say:

我XX岁。 Wǒ xx suì. I'm xx years old.

Birthday food

Many people like to eat “longevity noodles,” symbols of long life inspired by the noodle’s shape. Many people choose to eat Western-style birthday cakes, too.

rat

shǔ

Rats are charming, quick-witted, and make loyal friends—once you let people get to know you. You are organized and honest, and you prefer to live under your own rules.

ox

niú

You are a born leader and inspire confidence in all who know you. Being conservative and methodical, you find it hard to let your hair down, but you are good at most things you put your mind to.

tiger

hǔ

Tigers are born leaders. You are often respected for your courage, and you are good at standing up for what you believe in. However, you need to guard against being too bossy!

rabbit

tù

You are a warm, cozy type of person, affectionate and obliging. However, you get too sentimental and can seem superficial. You make a good negotiator, and you are the first to dispel fights.

dragon

lóng

You are full of life—enthusiastic and popular. You are intelligent, gifted, and a perfectionist, but these qualities can make you intolerant of others. Watch out for being too sharp with people.

snake

shé

Wise, charming, and romantic, you are a deep thinker and full of intuition. Avoid being stingy with money and always strive to keep your sense of humor about life.

horse

mǎ

You are very hard-working and independent. You are not easily led and are intelligent and friendly. You can be prone to showing off, but you are generally well-liked by everyone.

monkey

hóu

Witty and intelligent, you have a magnetic personality and are always well-liked. The monkey, however, must guard against being an opportunist and finds it hard to trust other people.

sheep

yáng

Except for the knack of putting your foot in it, the sheep is excellent company. You are elegant and artistic but can be viewed as a bit of a whiner, so try not to complain too much!

rooster

jī

The rooster is hard-working, shrewd, and good at making decisions. You speak your mind. You like looking good and can be extravagant sometimes. Watch out for seeming boastful.

dog

gǒu

Dogs make very loyal, faithful, and honest friends—a dog will never let you down. You are a worrier though, and overcritical, but your bark is worse than your bite.

pig

zhū

You are always good company—an intellectual with a strong sense of purpose. You are sincere and honest, but because you expect the same from others, you can be naive.

Seasons

China is the fourth biggest country in the world, only slightly smaller than the US, and the climate in the south and north differs greatly.

The climate

In the south, it is subtropical and the land is fertile and green. In the northern winter, the temperature rarely rises above freezing, and basketball courts are turned into ice-skating rinks. Between the various extremes, the weather is continental and shows marked seasonal differences.

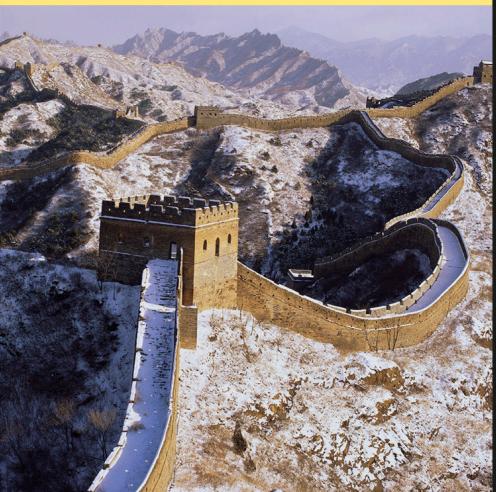

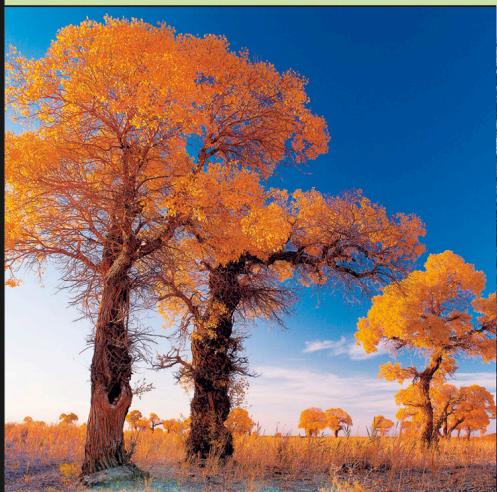

The four seasons

Nature puts on some dazzling seasonal displays in China, especially where the seasons are more extreme.

Questions

Here are two ways to ask a question in Chinese.

6.6

1. “ma”

The little word “ma” 吗 is all you need to make questions. Simply add it to a statement, and it makes the statement into a question.

他去北京。

Tā qù Běijīng.

他去北京吗?

Tā qù Běijīng ma?

汽车站在左边。

Qìchēzhàn zài zuǒbian.

汽车站在左边吗?

Qìchēzhàn zài zuǒbian ma?

He is going to Beijing.

Is he going to Beijing?

The bus stop is on the left.

Is the bus stop on the left?

Q. Turn this statement into a question.

公共汽车去北京。

Gōnggòngqìchē qù Běijīng.

The bus is going to Beijing.

Gōnggòngqìchē qù Běijīng ma? Is the bus going to Beijing?

A. 公共汽车去北京吗?

2. Boo!

That's not a Chinese word, but it sounds like one: "bù" 不, meaning "not" or "no." If you put "bù" between two repeated words (e.g., "qù" 去, meaning "to go"), it makes a question.

你去不去? Nǐ qù bù qù? Are you going?

Chinese doesn't have words for "yes" and "no." This is a way of saying "yes" or "no," too.

And you answer the question by repeating the verb.

去。

I'm going. /Yes.

Qù.

不去。

I'm not going. /No.

Bù qù.

Q. Answer this question (using "mǎi" 买, meaning "to buy").

你买不买? Nǐ mǎi bù mǎi? Are you going to buy it?

Nǐ mǎi bù mǎi?

The exception

You don't use "bù" between the verb for "to have," which is "yǒu" (pronounced "yo"). Instead you use "méi" 没 to make the negative.

有没有? Yǒu méi yǒu? Have you got one?

有。 Yǒu.

I have one. /Yes

没有。 Méi yǒu.

I haven't got one. /No

A. 买 · mǎi. Yes. 不买 · bù mǎi. No.

Getting around

China has more cyclists than anywhere else in the world, the third largest rail network, more airplanes taking off by the day, and a fast-evolving network of roads.

Bicycles

There are 400 million bicycles in China and an extra 300 million electric bicycles. Bike sales are decreasing, however, as more people can afford cars.

The pedicab

The famous rickshaw has been phased out in China and replaced by the pedicab.

Traffic

The traffic in Beijing and many other Chinese cities is congested and slow-moving. Trucks, buses, cars, taxis, bicycles, pedicabs, and minibuses clog the roads.

Burp!

Etiquette

Never start before your host says so. And don't be surprised if your host continuously urges you to try each dish—(s)he is making sure you are taken care of, not pressuring you.

Compliment the host on how good the food is. Just like at home, this will please your host. Also, be bold and say with conviction "I am happy to make good friends" or "I feel very welcome."

Don't flip over a fish to eat the meat on the other side. This is because Chinese people believe turning a fish resembles a boat capsizing.

Avoid stuffing yourself, then suddenly stopping. It's best to gradually stop eating. Leave a little food and drink—this means that you are satisfied and that the host has provided ample food.

Slurp!

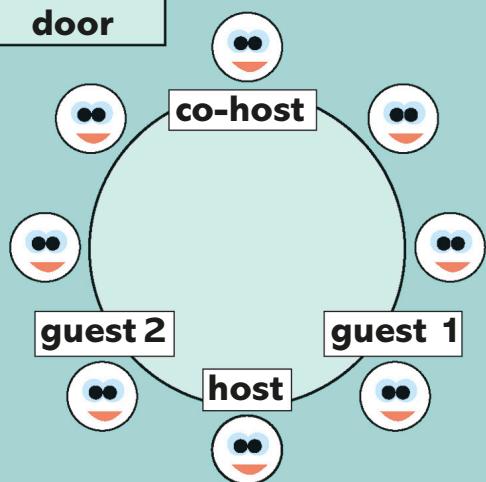

Do pour drinks for people sitting next to you.

Ignore slurps, burps, and other mealtime noises—these are considered sounds of appreciation.

Table plan

Tables are often round. The seating is arranged in order of status. The host sits facing the door, with guest 1 on his right, and guest 2 on his left. The co-host usually sits nearest to the door, with guests 3 and 4 around him or her. Status is often decided in order of age.

Chopstick no-nos

- Don't dig in the food on a plate. Instead, simply pick up the piece that you want.
- Don't let your chopsticks get covered in food juice or residue.
- Don't spear things with your chopsticks.
- Don't put chopsticks vertically in rice in a bowl, as it resembles the incense sticks for the dead.

Ping pong and Mahjong

A general term for Chinese martial arts:

武术 wǔshù

Traditional pastimes are alive and kicking all over China.

Martial arts

Many different forms of martial arts have developed over the past 2,000 years, and the styles are very distinctive. Each style offers self-defense, improved health, and self-cultivation.

Slang

Mandarin, like any language, is evolving. New slang is invented all the time, and words enter the language as foreign influence broadens. Here are some commonly used “new” words.

Lots of these words have been adopted since 1978 following Deng Xiaoping’s “Open door policy.” There has been a period of economic reform since then, as China has opened up to Japan and the West.

Haggling tips

Haggling is an art, and if you are good at it, you can get good deals. It requires play-acting on both sides.

tài guì le!

Sellers often have a large calculator, which you can pass between you with your bids.

- 1) Look around the market and choose what you want to buy.
- 2) Ask the price. duōshǎo qián?
- 3) If you think it is cheap, don't show it. Pretend you are surprised by how expensive it is. The initial price offered by the seller is usually AT LEAST 40% over the general price.
- 4) Throw out a low price, 1/5th of the one given by the seller. Have a big smile on your face when you say it. (Smiling always helps when haggling.)
- 5) The stallholder may pretend to be angry and pretend to not want to sell it. If this happens, then walk away; you will usually be called back.
- 6) From then on, only lift your price by 5% at a time. You should be able to buy at half the price of the first price given.

When is Chinese New Year?

Like other Chinese festivals, the new year is determined by the lunar calendar, so the date of the holiday varies from late January to mid-February.

Timetable of events

A few days before: Houses are thoroughly cleaned (to sweep away bad luck), debts repaid, hair cut, and new clothes bought. Chinese people believe the new year must start cleanly, or it may continue in the way it begins.... Doors are decorated with vertical scrolls of characters on red paper (like the ones on this page). Red is a lucky color.

On New Year's Eve, a reunion dinner is held where members of the family, near and far, get together to celebrate. The dinner is a sumptuous meal, and dumplings (thought to resemble gold nuggets) are eaten. Most stay up until midnight, when firecrackers and fireworks are lit to scare away evil spirits.

New Year's Day is spent visiting neighbors, family, and friends. Red packets containing "lucky money" are given by married relatives to unmarried junior members of the household. A dragon or lion dance troupe may perform to drive out bad spirits.

烟火

The 15th Day is a public holiday. The New Year holiday lasts seven days in Mainland China, but the festival traditionally lasts until the 15th day of the lunar month and ends with the "Lantern Festival." Here, houses are decorated with colorful lanterns and people eat special food.

Festival!

There are other major festivals in China.

Qing Ming

This is a day that Chinese people spend remembering and honoring their ancestors; it is sometimes called Tomb-Sweeping Day.

清明

Qīng Míng

Paper gifts are burned as offerings for the departed.

Mid-Autumn Festival

This festival happens during the full moon closest to the autumnal equinox. At this time, the moon is at its fullest and brightest—the best time to celebrate the abundance of the summer's harvest. Everyone eats mooncakes and family and friends get together to admire the harvest moon, lighting up the grill. Children often carry around brightly colored lanterns.

中秋节

Zhōng qīu jié

Mooncakes are often eaten in small slices with a cup of tea.

Dragon Boat Festival

This festival is celebrated yearly to commemorate the death of a famous Chinese poet, Qu Yuan, who drowned on the fifth day of the fifth lunar month more than 2,000 years ago. The Dragon Boat Festival is celebrated by boat races in which the boats are decorated like dragons. Competing teams row their boats forward to a drumbeat, racing to reach the finish line.

端午节

Dūan wǔ jié

The standard crew has 10 pairs of rowers, one drummer, and one steerer.

About the consultants

Katharine Carruthers, OBE, is Director of the UCL Institute of Education (IOE) Confucius Institute for Schools. Katharine is involved as a Principal Examiner for IGCSE and A-level Chinese for Cambridge International Examinations. She is well-known to many schools for her enthusiastic development of the SSAT Chinese Network.

Yu Bin has been a Chinese teacher for many years. She has taught Chinese at Beijing University, the University of Cambridge, and Peking University. She was a compiler of Collins Chinese Dictionary, an author of Business Chinese, and the chief writer of Chinese Examination Study Guides.

The characters on the jacket read:

走向中文

Zǒu xiàng Zhōngwén

They mean “Advance in Chinese”.
